Seaside's new library to open by end of month

THE NEW library will be known as the Gordon R. Forrest Memorial Library, and is located adjacent to city hall. Its architectural style is similar to that of the surrounding government buildings.

Seaside's library will be closed this week in order to move into newly expanded and improved facilities adjacent to city hall.

The Emerson Library, which has operated in a building moved to Seaside from Pacific Grove some 40 years ago, will become the Gordon R. Forrest Memorial Library, named in honor of one of Seaside's former city managers.

The new building, built with federal and local funds at a cost of $465,000, provides 10,000 sq. ft. of floor space, and approximately doubles the capacity of the library from its present level of 24,000 volumes to 45,000 volumes.

The library will continue to be staffed, stacked, and administered by the county library system, as it has in past years. The staffing level will double, from four to eight persons, and an effort will be launched to form a citizen advisory committee on library affairs, said County Librarian Barbara Wynn.

The Emerson Library, located at Elm and Imperial, will be closed this week to facilitate the move to the new library, which is expected to be opened to the public by Aug. 25, said Emerson Librarian Mrs. Dorothy Carnie.

The county "is attempting to hire from Seaside" to fill the new positions at the library, said Mrs. Wynn, and several candidates were interviewed for the position of librarian, although no decision had been reached last week on who would be hired.

The new library was financed at a cost of $465,000 with 56 per cent federal funds, the remainder coming from local revenues. By remaining within the county library system, Seaside is getting full library services for less cost to Seaside taxpayers than if the city financed the venture completely on its own, with a local city library tax. The residents of Seaside pay 16 per cents per $100 assessed valuation for the county library system, which provides the city with library services und materials.

Ms. Wynn said the new Seaside library will be the largest of all the county libraries when it opens. There will be some 25,000 volumes initially in the new facility, but that number will grow gradually until the full capacity of 45,000 is reached. There is a fund of $13,000 earmarked for new books and materials specifically for the Seaside library.

In addition, the library always has had access to the total county library collection of some 200,000 volumes, which can be drawn upon for Seasiders, said Mrs. Carnie. The new library initially will maintain the same schedule, from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, and from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Thursday and Friday.

Mrs. Carnie has been librarian at the Emerson Library since 1967, and is enthusiastic about the new library. However, she believes its location is less than perfect, since it is not within the city's residential area where the greatest concentration of children live.

"The old library has been used less than it could have been because of its location," she said. "Ever since the city tore down the urban renewal areas, this library has not been in a good location for children. The new library is not in a good location for the children, either."

Mrs. Carnie said she kept a survey one summer of the children who used the library, during a one-week period, and discovered that at least half of them attended the nearest school, and the others were scattered from all other sections of the city.

This she interpreted to mean that the library would have had greater use if it were located in the heart of the residential

City council backs off from plan on affirmative action employment

The Seaside City Council backed off from a proposed affirmative action plan at last week's council meeting.

The proposal was made by Councilman Steve Ross, following some discussion at a previous council meeting. The resolution Ross presented for council consideration would have declared the city's support for "all actions necessary to make equal employment opportunity a reality for all."

The resolution, in its initial form, stated that the council finds that the prohibition of discriminatory practices is not enough to achieve equal employment opportunities, and called for "positive and innovative action to assure that all possible barriers to employment of members of minority groups and women are eliminated at all levels of city government."

Councilmen each presented their different notions of what type of affirmative action the city should endorse. Councilman Joe Cota said the city should phase into an affirmative action program on "a gradual basis," and suggested more research before any formal plan is adopted.

Mayor B.J. Dolan said the city has always made an effort to hire employes on a non-discriminatory basis, and has hired from within the city wherever possible, instead of bringing people in from outside. Dolan said the plan, if adopted in its initial form, would create more problems within the city than it would solve.

Councilman Oscar Lawson favored the plan and said it was long overdue. Any additional costs of administering such an affirmative action plan would be offset, Lawson said, by the end results.

Councilman Glenn Olea said the proposed plan was well written and conceived, but expressed reservations about possible cost factors. Councilman Cota agreed that a cost analysis of the program should be made.

City Mgr. Dudley Lapham said the plan, even if adopted, "would just implement what we already have" in terms of equal employment by the city. The council continued the plan until a later date for more consideration.

In another matter, the city council debated further the question of spot designation for priorities in granting low-interest residential rehabilitation loans in the city through the redevelopment agency.

The planning commission has designated nine sections of the city in descending order of priority to become eligible for the loans, through the community development block grant funding program, and the plan was forwarded to the council for its action.

Steven B. Sachs, program manager with the Department of Housing and Urban Development in San Francisco, was present at Thursday's council meeting to explain federal guidelines concerning the residential rehabilitation programs. he said that arranging sections of the city for grant priorities can be done, if "it could be demonstrated that the rehabilitation was supporting other community development activities...was undertaken in a concentrated and sustaining manner, and would eliminate or arrest blighting conditions in the area."

The thorny political issue raised by the question of residential rehabilitation loans is who should get the loans, and when. Those in areas with low priorities, and a later eligibility date for the funds, may protest the spotting method of awarding the loans as unfair.

The alternate method of implementing the loan program is to concentrate the loans on those residences that are in the worst state of repair and therefore in most need of rehabilitation, without regard to their location in the city. The council will decide at a future meeting which approach to implementation of the program it will adopt.

The city council also voted, with the lone dissention of Councilman Oscar Lawson, to lower the city tax rate from $1.90 to $1.85 per $100 assessed valuation, at the suggestion of Mayor B.J. Dolan. Lawson voted against the proposal because he wanted the tax rate lowered even more.

Basically, the city is able to lower the tax rate and still maintain the same budget, with an actual increase of $10,000, because of higher assessed valuations within the city and because of greater revenues than initially anticipated, at the time the preliminary budget was adopted for the 1975-76 fiscal year.

This means that for a Seaside property owner with a $30,000 home, for example, the net savings on his yearly tax bill would amount to $3.75.

The city council also adopted a policy for the rehabilitation of substandard non-conforming residential property within the Laguna Grande Redevelopment Project. The resolution adopted by the council calls upon property owners in the area to rehabilitate their property to meet all applicable building laws and codes.

In those instances where the zoning and use conditions conform with city ordinances and redevelopment plans, the property may be eligible for the low-interest federal residential rehabilitation loan funds.

The resolution also spells out that if residential property in the project area has a planned future use different than its present use, the owner shall have the right to apply for and to receive a statement in writing from the city and the redevelopment agency about city intentions regarding use, including the projected date, if known, when such change of use from residential is contemplated.

The next step in the process of implementing the Laguna Grande Project is a study session planned for Aug. 18-22 with the planning commission, city council, and RACS for citizen discussion and comment. By Sept. 10, the planning commission is to report to the city council on its recommendations for plan changes. Then there will follow public hearings, further discussion, and finally adoption of an ordinance in October.

In a separate matter, Public Works Director Ted Thoeny informed the council that percolation ponds appear to be the most feasible method of recharging the groundwater level in Seaside.

The council had expressed concern over the recharging of the ground water table because of the possibility of salt water intrusion brought about by over-pumping. Already, water quality in some parts of Seaside is poor, and complaints have been lodged by Seasiders with the Public Utilities Commission.

"The only paractical approach to ground water recharge is through the utilization of percolation ponds similar to the turfed open space at Del Monte Manor," Thoeny said. "This system is maintenance-free and safe, as long as an excessive depth of water is not permitted in the turfed depression at any one time."

Thoeny suggested several possible sites for the percolation ponds, including a large land area in the Laguna Grande Project adjacent to the Monterey-Seaside city line; a location near the intersection of Hilby and Fremont; an area bounded by Sonoma and Trinity and by Terrace and Noche Buena; a location near Sunnyhill and buena, off Kimball; a spot between La Salle and San Pablo and bounded by Waring and Lowell; and a location behind Military Avenue, on Fort Ord property.

Seaside youth gets special art training

Benjie Smith is 14 years old and has been in hot water with juvenile authorities. But seven months ago, he became involved with a unique art apprenticeshop program that has changed his entire outlook on life.

Benjie is a Seaside youth from a family of 14 brothers and sisters, and is one of four youths from the ages of 13 to 17 who started with the art program through the probation department with local artist Dick Crispo, as instructor.

During the seven-month period of the project, all the students except Benjie dropped out. Crispo is impressed with his staying power and his obvious talent. Since he started with Crispo, Benjie has worked with felt tips, ink, collages, murals, wood blocks, and acrylics.

Now, he plans to learn lithography and to continue working with Crispo for another five years, through high school, and to ultimately make himself a professional artist.

Before becoming involved with the art class taught by Crispo through the county probation department, Benjie had done some "cut-and-paste" art work in his regular class work at Fremont School, but he had lost interest.

And before that, he and one of his brothers and become accustomed to having drawing contests, to amuse themselves. Now, in the art program with Crispo, Benjie worked every day with the artist at his studio, in his own home, or at several different locations.

He has produced some colorful and imaginative wood blook prints, as well as a boldly-rendered acrylic painting of the Carmel Mission, for which his father did quite a bit of work during its restoration years ago.

Bus schedules increased to benefit night students

Monterey Peninsula Transit is adding three additional trips for the benefit of MPC night students.

Effective Aug. 20, the buses leaving Pacific Grove at 6 p.m. and at 6:30 p.m. will continue through downtown Monterey to the intersection of Fremont and Aguajito.

These schedules will connect with buses on Line 1 (New Monterey), Line 5 (Carmel Point) and Line 4 (Carmel Rancho).

In addition, the Line 10 (Fremont-Ord Grove) trip which leaves Yosemite and San Pablo at 6:20 p.m. will be extended to Aguajito Road. A connection with Line 7 (Marina) will be made at Fremont and Broadway.

Other than the three trips listed above, there will be no special night service to MPC this year. Hugh Bayless, MPT Chairman, stated that the patronage on the night service operated last year was insufficient to justify the operating cost.

Regular fares of 35 cents cash, twenty rides for five dollars, or forty-four rides for ten dollars will apply on the added service. MPC registration cards will not be valid for bus rides this year.

Water recharge makes sense

(Editorial)

It is indeed wise of the Seaside City Council to begin looking into ways of recharging the ground water aquifer with fresh water, as it did at last week's regular council meeting.

After receiving a report from Public Works Director Ted Thoeny on possible alternatives to replenishing the water table, the council directed the staff to come back with more information on the percolation pond system outlined by Thoeny.

This method involves creating large, fresh water pond areas where water is allowed to seep gradually into the underground water table, to recharge the aquifer. This seems to be not only a sensible, but even urgent step to contemplate, especially since there is a very real threat of salt water intrusion in this area.

Once salt water is allowed to enter underground water tables because of overdrawing of the fresh water supply, the reversal of salt and fresh water balances in the aquifer is financially impractical, and therefore should be avoided at all costs.

Even by the admission of the California-American Water Co., which has proven to be distressingly vague about its facts concerning the water situation in Seaside, the water table in Seaside is being overdrawn. The Public Utilities Commission has set as the safe annual yield from the Seaside aquifer a maximum of 2,000 acre feet of water; Cal-Am already is drawing 3,500 acre feet from that aquifer.

Clearly, this presents a threat to the water supply that demands an immediate and forceful program to preserve the fresh water aquifer.

Late registration set for fall semester

Late registration for fall semester classes at Monterey Peninsula College will be held between Aug. 20 and Sept. 8.

Classes begin on Aug. 20, and a three-day open house will be held August 20-21-22 to welcome both new and old students to the campus.

Hours for late registration will be from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 7 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays and from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 4 p.m. on Fridays.

Students registering late should go to the admission office for an application form and student identification card. The students must then go to the class of their choice to have instructors sign them in if room is available. After being placed on the class roster, the student must return to the admissions office to pay fees and return the signed application forms.

The regular registration period ends on Friday, Aug. 15. Students can enroll between the hours of 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. all week long.

Students are urged to register prior to Aug. 15 in order to avoid long lines and to take advantage of a better selection of classes. A list of open classes will be posted in the student services building until the regular enrollment period ends.

The student activities office is coordinating the three-day open house, which will be held in the MPC Amphitheater from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. each day.

Edward J. Norris, assistant dean of student personnel, said the purpose of the event is to inform new and old students about the services and activities offered at the college. Various college offices and student organizations will have tables where information can be found and bands will provide musical entertainment, he said.

Mayor Considers Ban on Gambling

Seaside's city council may soon be presented with a proposal by Mayor Jack Oldemeyer that all gambling in the city be outlawed.

Oldemeyer said he is "considering" a proposal for such legislation. He has not yet discussed the idea with other members of the council, the mayor said.

The latest development came close on the heels of Oldemeyer's action earlier this week, asking for a grand jury investigation of Seaside. In a letter to the grand jury foreman, Exum Speegle, Oldemeyer asked, among other things, for an answer to the question: "Is there an effort underway to bring organized vice and gambling into Seaside?"

One of the five other questions also asked the jury to determine:

"Did an underworld group manipulate the appointment of the present chief of police in order to protect gambling interests and 'open up' Seaside?"

At his home, Councilman George D. Pollock denounced the implied attack on Chief John S. Davis as "the last straw."

"Such men (i.e. Oldemeyer) should not be allowed to public office," Pollock said. "This attack on one of the country's finest police officers is an abomination."

Oldemeyer, still smarting under Pollock's charge of two months ago that members of the council were trying to "get at" the police department, declared that his plan to abolish all gambling in the city should indicate "once and for all" who stands for "law and order in this town."

California law permits "draw poker" but apparently gives local communities the option of banning it.

"There are several places in Seaside which exist principally from poker games," the mayor said. "They tend to attract an undesirable element."

In the Night's Silence, A Long Wait...
But the Fifth Man Never Showed Up

Had a stranger happened onto the scene, he would have withdrawn with whispered apologies--sure that he had interrupted a solemn wake.

The impression wouldn't have been very wrong, for while not quite a wake, it was a death watch that awaited the demise of Seaside's last chance for peaceable settlement of the city's current troubles.

Such was the atmosphere on Monday evening, as four men sat, somber-faced, in the well-appointed living room of the stucco house at 616 Hamilton Street, waiting for--yet not really expecting--the arrival of the fifth individual.

This was the truce meeting, called last week by City Councilman George "Sarge" Cunningham at his home for an "informal discussion aimed at resolving many of the outstanding differences," i.e.--the threat of recall which now confronts all members of the council, save Cunningam.

This was to be the last-ditch effort to heal the wounds to restore at least a semblance of amity in the new city's government. Like boys dutifully making the annual Sunday afternoon visit to the pastor's house, they sat, uncomfortable, in comfortable, deep-cushioned chairs--Jack Oldemeyer, Joe Cota, Dr. John Craige, Cunningham.

The missing fifth guest: George D. Pollock, pivotol figure of the growing controversy.

Councilman George Pollock: Where is He Going?

The name George Pollock has only to be mentioned to the average man on the streets of Seaside and, with few exceptions, an immediate reaction takes place.

Either the citizen will smile und mention something to the effect that Pollock is "courageous" and "intelligent," or he will snarl between tight lips that the councilman is a "trouble-maker" who doesn't have the real interests of Seaside at heart but is more interested in personal gain.

Who is this greying little man with the quick smile und acid tongue, and what makes him "tick?"

Opinions about the man are so diverse, and openly partisan, that the best hope of attempting to understand the man and his motives is through getting to know Pollock, himself.

George D. Pollock was born in Mineral, Kans., and spent his boyhood years in Illinois and Missouri. Over family opposition, he entered the Navy during World War I. In 1919, after discharge from the Navy and a period of unemployment, Pollock found employment with the Bank of California in San Francisco.

He worked for the bank nine years simultaneously attending evening classes at the American Institute of Banking and later the San Francisco Law College. He completed the work toward his law degree in three and one half years and was admitted to practice in the California and federal courts.

Because of his banking background, Pollock was recommended as trust officer for the Monterey County Trust and Savings Bank of Salinas. In 1929, after a year with the bank, Pollock opened his own law office in Salinas, an office he keeps to this day.

One of his most memorable cases, and one to which he points as an example of his contention that he has "always been a friend to the laboring people" is that in which he represented the shed workers in the lettuce industry in 1934. After four weeks of taking testimony he won the workmen a two-year contract at, in Pollock's words, "a fair wage."

Building Permits Sagging

As compared to last month's high point of $341,500 in building permits, August would seem to be going through a case of doldrums.

With this week's issue, the total recorded amount for building permits since the first of the month has been only $84,950. Of that amount $82,500 has been for actual building of dwellings and commercial structures while $2,450 has been devoted to alterations, repair, and additions to structures already standing.

Seaside library to move into new quarters area, above Fremont Boulevard, instead of adjacent to the city hall.

"We're as far as we can get from Seaside High School," Mrs. Carnie said. A glance at a map of the city quickly confirms the accuracy of her allegation.

But Cleve Williams, Seaside parks and recreation director and spearhead for obtaining federal monies for the library, believes location is not a real detriment to library use.

"This is a city of some two square miles," he observed. "People are just a stone's throw from the library. Any kid who wants to, can get on his bike and ride it down there."

Politics aside, the new library is an impressive structure. The architects for the building were Keeble and Rhoda of Monterey, and its style echoes that of the city hall, which was designed by Edward Durrell Stone. Between the city hall and the new library there is a large open area which will be planted with grass to provide an ample lawn.

Inside, an open, airy atmosphere is projected by the use of large windows, and thick carpeting muffles noise and affords a feeling of quiet luxury. And included in the new building is a large community meeting room, as well as a children's reading room.

History of the Emerson Library Club in Seaside

By Dorothy Carnie
Emerson Librarian

Emerson Library Club minutes report a party Nov. 8, 1933 to celebrate the club's third birthday, but the earliest record of club activities indicates that in January 1932 the members were considering a new location for the library.

They decided to buy, for $1,500, a house and three lots from Doctor Roberts. The $15 a month payments were to include interest, taxes and water. The bill for moving, dated Feb. 2, 1932, was $20 for moving books, cases and equipment. Members later voted a letter of appreciation to Abinante's for moving a piano from the school to the library.

The library was already a county library branch, and the county was paying $8 a month for rent. On May 29, 1932 an executive board meeting was held to urge members to attend a supervisors' meeting to protest a 4 per cent tax cut which would eliminate the county library.

The minutes of June 10, 1932 report receipt of a letter from the grandson of Ralph Waldo Emerson expressing appreciation to club members for naming the library for his grandfather. He sent several volumes of Emerson's works. Later a Mrs. Dutton, also a descendent, presented to the club an engraving of Emerson which still hangs in the library.

By June of 1932, club members were already considering the purchase of a lot on which to build a library. By December they had decided to try to raise enough money to pay cash for a lot on Elm Avenue, and they had an estimate of $679.43 for putting up a building.

Apparently the Roberts house had not been satisfactory as on Feb. 24, 1933 it was reported that a building on Hamilton would be satisfactory for the library temporarily at a rent of $6 a month. The move was made and a housewarming was held on March 17. A work day had been held March 11 to paint a sign, build a fence and plant shrubs and flowers.

Throughout the existence of the Emerson Library Club funds were raised by holding card parties, pie socials, carnivals, dances, plays and even a minstrel show which was so successful that it was presented several times.

In August of 1934 it was suggested by a Mr. Waldo that the library might be built with SERA funds, in which case it would be necessary for the club to deed its lot to the county. The suggestion was considered seriously at a special meeting, but members were afraid that the county might not allow social events, and they decided to keep the lot and raise money for the building themselves.

On July 5, 1935, Mrs. Blanche Smith's application for the position of librarian, held until then by Mrs. Marie Chapman, was approved. She has been assistant librarian for some years and remained librarian until her retirement Dec. 1, 1957.

On April 6, 1936 club members voted to obtain a legal deed for Lot 2, Block 21, Vista del Rey Tract. The financial report at the time listed a bank balance of $118.80, building fund $93.80 and general fund $25.

A special meeting was called Sept. 11, 1937 to report a 24 by 40 foot building available in Pacific Grove for $100, with an estimate of $300 for moving it to Seaside. Mr. Stratton said the building was all redwood, seemed to be solid, had a toilet and plenty of water pipes. For another $100 it could be enlarged to 30 by 40 feet. A motion was carried to buy the building.

On Nov. 20 a check for $684.50 was received -- apparently a bank loan -- to be deposited in a special building fund. A committee was appointed to get estimates on lumber and other supplies. At the Dec. meeting it was decided to build a basement under the building.

A list of club members at the end of 1937 included 52 names.

On March 2, 1938 cement for the basement was poured. By May 4 the building was ready for sides, and the S. F. Wrecking Company offered to supply roof, floor, some siding and shingles for $185. A letter was sent to the city manager of Monterey thanking the city for the use of a cement mixer.

At the Aug. 3 meeting a list of those who had made donations to the building fund was read, and plans were announced for the dedication of the building on Aug. 24, 1937.

Regular club activities for finishing and furnishing the library continued. At the Jan. 2 meeting in 1942 it was reported that no activities had been held in December because of blackouts after the Dec. 7 Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

On May 3, 1943 a letter from Wells Fargo was received reporting that the debt on the building had been paid.

A suggestion was made at the meeting of Jan. 27, 1947 that the Library Club's building be deeded to the Monterey Bay Grange, and by March 12 representatives of both organizations were meeting to make arrangements for the transfer.

On March 24, 1947, Emerson Library Club trustees were authorized to convey to the trustees of the Monterey Bay Grange "those certain premises...Lot 2, in Block 21, Vista del Rey Tract...being the location of the building now known as the Emerson Library, on condition that the Grange finish the basement in the present building and maintain there the Emerson Library until there is no longer a need for said library."

A motion was carried that club members hold one more party before disbanding.

Ecological reserve status for Carmel Bay approved

Legislation which will virtually assure ecological reserve status for Carmel Bay was approved last week by the Assembly.

The measure, authored by Sen. Donald L. Grunsky (R-Aptos) and Assemblyman Frank Murphy, Jr. (R-Santa Cruz) requests the establishment of a 1530 acre Carmel Bay Ecological Reserve between Pescadero Point and Granite Point in the Bay.

Upon final passage of the measure, Grunsky stated, "The question was whether we should preserve this unique and fragile ecosystem in its natural state or risk its destruction by development and increased use for recreational purposes. We concluded there was no choice but to seek the highest possible protection by creating an Ecological Reserve under the Department of Fish and Game rather than develop it as a recreational area under the Department of Parks and Recreation."

"This," Grunsky explained, "was what was done in 1935 when we created the Point Lobos State Reserve, which has remained in its pristine state the past 40 years for public enjoyment."

Assemblyman Murphy stated that he expects public hearings to be held in Carmel in October or November on regulations affecting the operation of the new Reserve.

Carmel Bay contains a unique ecosystem of relatively diverse habitats in a small area. The Carmel Submarine Canyon, in the northern portion of the proposed Reserve and adjacent to the existing Point Lobos Ecological Reserve is closer to shore and more accessible than any other known submarine canyon in California. The canyon contains hundreds of various unique plant species on its almost vertical walls and its spectacular sandfalls down the canyon walls are widely written about.

On the south end of the proposed reserve is Stillwater Cove which contains dense stands of giant kelp providing the home for many female sea otters with pups.

Concern over the bay's degradation first became a public issue in 1970 and has been a continuing controversy.

Father an son make a team on local radio station

Like father, like son applies as much to the world of broadcasting as any other, it seems.

Especially at a Seaside radio station where Bill Greenwell and his 17-year-old son Tony work back-to-back as announcers. Bill started as an announcer at KZEN last February, and his son, through the Monterey County Job Corps program, started his apprenticeship there three months ago.

Father Bill takes the microphone from 10 p.m. to 2 a.m., just after son Tony completes his 5 p.m, to 10 p.m. stint. Bill got his first broadcasting position in 1967 with KMBY with a third class operator's license, and was an announcer there for three years. He now combines his radio position at KZEN with a temporary position with the city of Seaside's parks and recreation department, as a recreation leader at Covell School.

Tony developed his interest in radio through his father and through his interest in acting. He is a student at Seaside High School.

"When my father started at KMBY, I was interested in acting," Tony said. "He told me a lot of actors got started in radio, to develop their voice. I heard that KZEN needed trainees, so I went there. They gave me air time and training, and I got my provisional license, which enabled me to go on the air."

Both father and son present basically music programs, sandwiched with talk and public service announcements. The emphasis is not upon personalities, but upon the music itself.

Between 12 p.m. and 10 p.m., the station follows a regular pattern of music and talk or announcement breaks. After midnight, that pattern is somewhat relaxed, and there is more room for music and conversation.

That's the time of day when Bill Greenwell places a heavier emphasis upon jazz-a difficult musical form to hear these days on any commercial radio station.

And--guess what?--after they leave the radio station, the two Greenwells talk about...radio!

Junior olympics scheduled for Seaside

The Seaside Parks and Recreation Department will sponsor an International Week, in conjunction with the junior Olympics being held this month. The dates for the event are Aug. 18-22.

Throughout the week, there will be games, arts and crafts, and sports activities leading up to the Olympics.

In the Olympics, there will be an International Parade leading up to the games, and after the parade the games will begin with a variety of running, jumping, and throwing events to enter.

Those between the ages of six and 15 years may enter the Olympics, and separate divisions will then be established. At 9 a.m. Thursday, preliminaries will be held at Seaside High School for the finals, which are to be held Friday at the same location.

All boys and girls between the ages of six and 15, regardless of their place of residence or school, may enter. Signups will be held the week of Aug. 18-22 at Covell, Manzanita, Del Rey Woods, Ord Terrace and Noche Buena schools.

Cypressaires to perform

Sunday, Aug. 17, at 2 p.m., the Cypressaires, the Monterey Peninsula's barbershop chorus, will present the program at Carmel's historic outdoor Forest Theater on Mountain View at Santa Rita.

This is one of the free weekly concerts presented each Sunday afternoon in July and August by the City of Carmel under the sponsorhiip of its Cultural Commission. All of the concerts are presented without admission charge and all residents and visitors to Carmel are always welcome to attend. The theatre is easy to reach, being just a short walk up from downtown Carmel.

This week's program will feature many of the old songs, familiar to almost everyone, sung in modern barbershop style. The forty-man chorus is made up of area residents who assemble to sing together once every week under the direction of Neil Keefer.

From within the chorus are drawn several quartettes, and it is anticipated that one or two visiting quartettes may also take part in the program. The annual concert by the Cypressaires at Sunset Center is invariably sold out. Here is an opportunity to hear them sing outdoors in the pines of the Forest Theater.

ASTRO - FUN - OLOGY

Aug. 13-20

EXUBERANT ARIES Mar. 21 - April 21: Lady Luck will be sitting on your shoulder...things you do will be successful even though they shouldn't be..don't push your luck too far! A surprise will be given you by your partner..they wish to share their love for you...by showing their appreciation.

DETERMINED TAURUS April 21 - May 21: If you are being called slow baby-pay them no heed for you are just "careful Sue" and not going headlong into a problem but being your sweet careful self..tell those naggers to "get lost" - you'll come out all right!

VERSATILE GEMINI May 22 - June 21: An acquaintance, from your past, will get in touch with you...this person brings fond memories of your successful friendship...they will also offer you a bonus of friendship - possibility of a better paying position.

MOON CHILDREN June 22 - July 23: Moodiness may be one of the nicknames given Moon Children but it is only caused from being kind and not spouting off everything you feel - let them talk on, for getting rid of a negative element is your business anyhow! Perhaps they were the cause of the moodiness?

REGAL LEO: July 24 - Aug. 23: Action before thinking is not really your "cup of tea" so suggest you don't indulge yourself. Times may afford you the luxury of "jumping" but most of the time your plans are to be thought out carefully before applying.

DISCRIMINATING VIRGO Aug. 24 - Sept. 23: The opposite sex is giving you "THE EYE" - their intentions are honorable so proceed with full knowledge of what you are getting into. A call from a female friend will give you great pleasure for renewing this acquaintance is good.

ELEGANT LIBRA Oct. 24 - Nov. 22: The opportunity for financial gain is motioning you to come forward and size up the situation. It is being offered for a far off project..the future holds many things we can't see - yet will fully enjoy - when we plan for them...do so! The opportunities for short trips, with work, are being offered.

SENSUAL SCORPIO Oct. - Nov. 22: That winning feeling is with you now and for a week or so to come. The feeling of success is yours; for the effort you have put forward is now paying off in many areas. Tighten the purse strings as your good sharing feelings may cost you "dearie."

EXPANSIVE SAGITTARIUS Nov. 23 - Dec. 21: Watch the want to throw in the towel for something you can't imagine but know it would be better...don't think so. You know what you have now...don't trade it for a speculation of unknowingness..."Hand in there!"

ZEALOUS CAPRICORN Dec. 22 - Jan. 20: Females in the work area will be giving you opposition but you are used to that....suggest you beat them at their own game by not responding to their quips..they will soon give up. Home changes are in the offing...decide just what you want for the choise you are going to have.

EXTRAORDINARY AQUARIUS Jan. 21 - Feb. 19: Career opportunities will be more demanding than before. You will never be caught off guard, but being "up tight" all the time in expectation plays havoc with your personality....cool it and just relax - people will still love you - honestly!

MYSTERIOUS PISCES Feb. 20 - March 21: An older friend of your youngsters could be giving them "bad" advice; for their actions - check into some of their activities and be satisfied that their actions are good and pure...if not, be ready to take positive steps.

Who's running in '76

The question of who's running and who's not is fast becoming pertinent in Seaside as election time draws near. Already, political battles and decisions are being made in other arenas which may influence municipal elections in March of 1976.

Three positions on the Seaside city council will be filled in that election. They are the position of mayor, and two councilmen. Those whose terms will expire include Mayor B.J. Dolan, and Councilmen Steve Ross and Joe Cota.

To test the polital winds, the Seaside Post inquired of the councilmen what their intentions are concerning the forthcoming elections. Only Steve Ross stated firmly that he would run for re-election. Dolan and Cota both said they have not yet made up their minds.

"My intention is to run for re-election," Ross said. "Ive been considering running for mayor, but I wouldn't do it in a crowded field. There are a lot of things I see that need to be dealt with, and I think for me to back off at this point may set us back."

Ross said he considers the most important issue in Seaside is economic development of the community.

"We need to get people on every possible payroll, and we need to start getting them jobs and getting them off welfare," he said. "I'm concerned about the climate in the community, and getting it to feel alive again and to work together to develop trust within the individual family setting, and to deal with a base to allow the community to gain strength within itself."

Ross said he believes his experience of three consecutive terms on the council, plus his experience in dealing with state and federal agencies, is valuable to helping Seaside advance.

Councilman Joe Cota, who has served on the city council since 1954, with the exception of a six-year period when he took a breathing spell from politics, is undecided whether to seek another term.

Even if he does seek re-election, Cota said he would never consider running for mayor.

"And if I do run, it will be a no-campaign," Cota said. "I'll just list my name. If I'm not known in this town by now, forget it!"

Cota said he is involved with starting a tennis club and will wait to make a decision about the city council elections until he can foresee how much time he will need to commit to that venture, should it come to fruition. Cota said he expects to make up his mind about whether to run for city council within the next month or two.

Mayor B.J. Dolan said that he simply hasn't made up his mind whether to seek another term. And Councilman Glenn Olea said he doesn't know if he would take a shot at the mayor's job.

Councilman Oscar Lawson said he is considering "several options," among them a possible try to county supervisor, should Supervisor Roger Poyner decide to run for state senate, with the news that State Sen. Donald Grunsky won't seek another term. Lawson said he is also considering the city council and mayor's race in Seaside, but for the time being he's just "sitting back, waiting to see what will develop."

'Light Up the Sky' lights up theatre circuit

The Cannery Row Dinner Theatre's production of Moss Hart's "Light Up the Sky" provides a very entertaining evening. Dinner is served at 7 p.m. and curtain time is 8:30 p.m. This play continues on Wednesday through Sunday evenings until Sept. 13.

This comedy by the master playwright, Moss Hart, contains all the ingredients of good comedy -- including a streak of the melancholic and even tragic. The fate of a young playwright -- including the fickleness of the production team (director, producer, and star) is the theme of the play.

The script contains excellent satire. Stella, played by Zelma Weinfield, has many of the most humorous lines; Mrs. Weinfield's timing is excellent, Vonn Hamilton's interpretation of Tyler, husband of the star, reveals his background in dance; his stage movement is polished.

Although lovely to look at, Janice Mancillas' Irene is disappointing. It is stiff and self-conscious. Most distracting are her hand gestures and diction. Jane Strauch's Frances Black adds zest and zaniness to the production.

Alan Robb's Carleton Fitzgerald, the director within the play, is delightful. His "I could cry," focuses the theme and is delivered perceptively each time. Ken Hardy's voice projection needs energy, although gives a sensitive interpretation of the experienced and mollified playwright.

JANICE MANCILLAS as Irene Livingston, the star, and Frank Favalora as Sidney Black, the producer, have an encounter in "Light Up the Sky" at the Cannery Row Dinner Theatre.

Monday, July 21, marked the official opening of the Grand Session for the three bodies.

On Tuesday evening, July 22, the 120th Annual Communication Banquet was held at the Fresno Convention Center.

The Rev. Frederick J. Eikerenkoetter, better known to his millions of followers as Reverend Ike, was the keynote speaker.

The famous "Get it now" philosopher and evangelist has been widely acclaimed throughout most of the world as a positive force for earthy success and happiness. Reverent Ike says, "The best thing you can do for the poor is not be one of them."

Much of Reverend Ike's talk dealt with money, and ways to get it. He told the more than 5,000 people in attendance if they want a better place in life, they must see themselves as already there.

Borrowing a line from the Comic, Flip Wilson, "What you see is what you get - that is a very simple comic line, but it contains one of the greatest cosmic truths," he said.

According to Reverend Ike, the way for an individual to get more money is to "see yourself with more money, see yourself opening your secret safe at home." "And those of you who do not have a secret safe at home should install one for the new money," he said.

"Money and I have a good relationship--I love it," he said. "Money has never come between me and the Lord, but I love the Lord a lot better now that I have money.

"If you believe that the infinite is within you, is working within you, then nothing can stop you. You will get to where you want to go if you look like you are already there." He calls it the power of positive vision. Ike said much of an individual's fate is controlled by his subconscious mind.

"This is why I believe the best time for a person to practice power of positive vision is just before he goes to sleep."

Reverend Ike said more happens to you and for you and your fate while you are asleep than while you are awake. Thinking about positive things just before going to sleep puts them into the mind while sleeping, a time the unconscious mind is most active.

Reverend Ike said if you want to achieve a particular good, you must see yourself as the one who already is being, doing, having the good which you so much desire. "Never see yourself as struggling to your goal; never concern yourself with the mechanics, but see yourself as already celebrating at your goal."

Up to 20 units of transferable college credits can be earned during the upcoming fall semester through the College by Television and Radio curriculum offered by Monterey Peninsula College.

MPC has been presenting college courses by television for several years and this fall is pioneering a new college by radio approach.

There will be five College by Television courses and one College by Radio class, said Phillip Nash, associate dean of instruction and planning.

College by Radio will present Music 195, a series of six, six-week courses each worth one unit of credit. The courses will be broadcast on KWAV-FM by Scott Macclelland, classical music director, with the first segment starting on Thursday, Sept. 4.

The series is designed to provide a general appreciation for the standard musical works of the Renaissance, Baroque, Classic, Romantic, Impressionistic and Contemporary periods. Henry Smith, an MPC music instructor, is writing a workbook to be used with the course. The programs will be aired between 10 p.m. and 11 p.m. on Thursdays.

College by Television classes range in subject from the dramatic arts to man's cultural development and mathematics.

Thirteen different productions will be presented in Drama 195, Classic Theater, to be broadcast Thursdays from 8:30 p.m. to 11 p.m. on KQED, Channel 9, starting Sept. 25. Repeat showings are scheduled Saturdays from 7:30 p.m. to 10 p.m. The course, worth three units, will analyze the evolution of dramatic literature through discussion and observation. Each two-hour play will be preceeded by a 30-minute disdussion by drama scholars and critics.

The plays include: "Macbeth," "Edward II," "The Duchess of Malfi," "Paradise Restored," "She Stoops to Conquer," "The Rivals," "Candide," "The Wild Duck," and "Hedda Gabler," "Trelawny of the 'Wells'," "The Three Sisters," "The Playboy of the Western World," and "Mrs. Warren's Profession." An anthology of plays and a study guide is available through the MPC Bookstore.

Interdisciplinary Studies 195, Ascent of Man, will be aired on Channel 9, Tuesdays from 9 p.m. to 10 p.m. beginning Sept. 23 and repeated Sundays from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. It will also be shown from 3 p.m. to 4 p.m. on Fridays on KTEH Channel 54 and on subsequent Sundays from 10 p.m. to 11 p.m.

This class, worth two units, seeks out man's discovery processes, with emphasis on the way he works rather than what he has discovered. The first segment begins in the Omo Valley in Southern Ethiopia and runs chronologically until it covers laboratory discoveries involving DNA and genetic engineering. The book, "Ascent of Man," can be purchased in local bookstores. Instructors are John Phillips and Don Compton.

Psychology 195, As Man Behaves, is worth three units and will be shown on channels Cable 3 and 10 on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays from 6:30 a.m. to 7 a.m. starting Sept. 8. It will be rebroadcast on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays during the same time period. The course presents an introduction to psychology, with John Blakemore, an MPC psychology instructor, monitoring the course and bringing in guests. Two texts are needed for this course which is designed for students going on to four-year colleges or universities.

Data Processing 195, Making it Count, is an introduction to data processing and computer science concepts. The class may be viewed on Cable channels 3 and 10 from 7 a.m. to 7:30 a.m. Mondays and Wednesdays starting Sept. 8 or during repeat broadcasts Tuesdays and Thursdays at the same time. MPC instructor Bela Banathy will monitor the course and provide for supervised laboratory sessions, during which students will work with MPC's computing equipment.

Three units of credit may be earned, and a required textbook and two workbooks can be bought at the MPC bookstore. The class will cover historical background, evolution of modern equipment, fundamentals regarding digital computing equipment, operation of computing facilities, programming and langage comparisons and the impact of computers on management and society.

Anthropology 195, Dimensions in Culture, will run on Cable channels 3 and 13 Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays from 8 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. starting Sept. 8 and will be reshown during that time period on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. Local instructor Lynne Moundy will monitor the course, which is worth three units.

The course provides a general introduction into cultural anthropology, examining the techniques used by anthropologists in the study of this subject. Primitive cultures will be covered and there will be filmed interviews with several outstanding anthropologists.

Registration procedures for both the College by Television and College by Radio offerings are the same as for other courses given by MPC.

on the Monterey Peninsula ever since. A Department of Fish and Game study made last year shows that almost 70 per cent of the scuba diving done north of San Luis Obispo is done in Monterey County and the majority of that is done in Carmel Bay.

Persons who are familiar with and have studied Carmel Bay, such as UC Berkeley researchers and Jacques Cousteau, agree that significant harmful changes have taken place in the bay in the last 10 years.

In August 1970, an underwater park was first proposed and the State Lands Commission held a public hearing last year in Carmel on the subject.
